ANALYSIS

ACTIVITY 2

What is the importance of festivals and rituals in the Philippines?

ABSTRACTION

Festival in the Philippines

Jayson L. Dedal

Philippines is celebrating many festivals all year round. Every region, provinces and Cities has different kinds of festivities, events and schedule. On any given day, there is sure to be a festival in a town or city somewhere in the Philippines. People celebrate every festival with excitement, enthusiasm and high spirits. Filipinos enjoys every moment when celebrating the festival. The event or fiesta is characterized by the community to express the warm welcome of the harvest, express religious fervor, or commemorate a historic event. It is among the ties that bind, showing and strengthening the shared history, values, and experiences of a specific group of people.

One way of preserving and promoting the arts in the various regions of the Philippines is by practicing it as often as possible. Contemporary art practices are actual practices of the arts in everyday life. (Perez, 2016)

Have you ever experienced joining a singing or a dance contest in your school or barangay? Or attended various festivals and rituals in the Philippines?

Singing or dance contest in your school or barangay is just one evidence of the actual practice of arts. Through holding different annual and cultural and literary competitions, we are helping in the promotion and preservation of arts.

Contemporary art practices are expressed in different ways, by an individual or by collaboration of several artists. Perhaps one collaborative art that is very common to every region is the festival. A festival may be composed of various events such as street dancing, singing competitions, architectural decors like floats, and a lot more.

We are all aware that the Philippines have various kinds of festivals. It is a known fact that we, Filipinos, everywhere in the world love to celebrate and get together.

Lasting anywhere between a day to an entire month, Philippine festivals are huge cultural celebrations that attract both local and foreign tourists due to its colorful and festive nature.

Colonization for over 365 years in the presence of the Spanish government, the country has greatly influenced the culture and its stature to art's perspective. Attending a Philippine festival is definitely something you have to experience in order to witness how rich our country's culture is.

Below are some of the many festivals that represent our Philippine arts.

Ati-Atihan Festival

Kalibo, Aklan

One of the oldest religious festivals in the country which started from the feast of Sto. Niño. Ati-atihan is characterized by a parade filled with face-painted celebrants, loud bang of instruments and other tribal instruments. Tourist flock to Kalibo to celebrate a known “Filipino Mardi Gras”. Using Materials such as but not limited to charcoal and painted, the participants painted their skin with black to imitate the dark skin of the Sto. Niño.

Sinulog Festival

Cebu City

Just like the Ati-Atihan of Kalibo, Aklan, the Sinulog is also a festival that celebrates in honor of the boy Jesus. It is a festival that attracts most tourists even for locals. The festival is also a showcase of different culture of different regions as it invites neighboring regions and provinces to join the said festival.

Bonok-bonok Festival

Surigao City, Surigao del Norte

The term Bonok which means “heavy rain” in Sinurigaanon dialect. It is a festival celebrated every 9th day of September the feast day of Senior San Nicolas de Tolentino the patron saint of the capital of the Province. It features street dancing of Mamanwas’ costumed celebrants, like Sinulog of Cebu, it also showcases neighboring municipalities and other provinces’ culture.

Panagbenga Festival

Baguio City

A colorful festival from the City of Pines which is a magnet for tourist to celebrate the Panagbenga. It is a Kankanaey term which means “season of blooming”. It features numerous floats decorated by colorful flowers that are the main attraction of the festival aisled the streets of Baguio aside from its climate.

Pahiyas Festival

Lucban, Quezon

Some festivals may attract tourist because of the street dancing or fancy floats. Unlike any other festival, the Pahiyas festival is a showcase of the bountiful harvest decorated in every home in Lucban, Quezon in honour of San Isidro Labrador, the patron saint of the Farmers.

MassKara Festival

Bacolod City

The City of Smile provides a glimpse of its culture and custom for being or looks happy all the time by its Festival of Smile showcasing the smiling mascara covering every face of Bacoleños. The festival attracts most youngsters as it celebrated every semester break.

The happy face of the festival is either made of paper mâché or just a make up that covers the face of the participants and other attendee.

Moriones Festival

Marinduque

This week-long celebration of the life of St. Longinus is what makes Marinduque one of the top destinations during Holy Week in the Philippines. Morion is the helmet worn by the centurions while Moriones refers to the costumed penitents re-enacting the search for St. Longinus, hunted by his fellow centurions for converting to Christianity. During the festival you will see Marinduqueños dressed up as centurions (Moriones) looking for Longinus. One person acts as Longinus, hiding from them while the townspeople play along and allow him to hide in their houses. Via cruce or the re-enactment of the Passion of Christ also happens during this Philippine festival.

There are still a lot of Philippine festivals not mentioned in the list. The next time you book a flight, you might want to consider scheduling it during that destination's festival dates. The festivals mentioned above are just some of the many festivals of the various regions. These festivals provide temporary escape for the Filipinos by providing them with artistic wonders.

The ritual or rites are also exemplifying of Philippine folk tradition and art, practiced in almost every region. They are series of ceremonies or prescribed actions performed for a specific purpose. There are ceremonial rites, religious rites, betrothal and marriage rituals, often accompanied by dancing, can be simple or complex, private or public, and can last for a few minutes or stretch for days. They exist in the regions because of a certain need, such as the need to obtain order and harmony. The one who performs the rite is called baylan (priest) or the babaylan (priestess). In other rituals, the shaman, a seer, or a healer, acts as an intermediary between man and the spirit world, using the art of magic.

Rituals are also found in ordinary, everyday life. Even personal daily routines undergo a process of a ritual, like the ritual preparing for school, washing the hands, combing hair, etc. The family has social rituals for greetings such as the beso for friends and pagmamano, a respectful greeting of children to the children to the elders.

Pahiyas festival is a colorful decoration of houses that showcases the bountiful harvest of the locality with the food colored hangs and surrounded the houses of Lucban, Quezon.

Kadayawan Festival

Davao City

The festival's name is derived from the Mandaya word "madayaw," meaning treasured or valuable, as the locals use this time to give thanks for the season's bountiful harvest. Back in the day, the ethnic tribes of Davao would come together to celebrate abundant crops, performing rituals that paid tribute to the nature gods.

They used to display fruits, vegetables, flowers, rice, and corn grains on their mats and at the front of their houses as a sign of respect for the great year they've had. They used to sing and dance as well, much like what they do today.

In the 1970s, then Mayor Elias B. Lopez, encouraged the different Davao tribes to showcase their thanksgiving rituals. In 1986, the Davao City government launched a project that aimed to unite the people during the turbulent times of the Martial Law.

Back then, the name of the festival was called Apo Duwaling, after three natural wonders you can find the region: Mt. Apo, Durian, and Waling-waling.

It was first officially renamed as the Kadayawan Festival in 1988 by then Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, and now, over 30 years later, it's still being celebrated.

Dinagyang Festival

Iloilo City

The Dinagyang Festival is a famous and religious and cultural festival in Iloilo City, Philippines held on the 4th Sunday of January, or right after the Sinulog in Cebu and the Ati-Atihan Festival in Kalibo, Aklan. Dinagyang was also voted as the Best Tourism event three times in a row among any other festivals in the Philippines. It is also the most awarded festival in the country because of its legacy, popularity, and innovation. Dinagyang received honors and regarded as a World Class Festival and dubbed as the "Queen of all festivals" in the Philippines.

Lechon Festival

Balayan, Batangas

The Lechon Festival (English: Parade of Roast Pigs; Filipino: Parada ng Lechon) is a religious and cultural festival in Balayan, Batangas, Philippines held every June 24. The festival is celebrated in honor of St. John the Baptist. Numerous activities are performed such as lechon parade, and water dousing.
