Creative Writing
Quarter 2 – Module 1
Various Elements, Techniques and Literary Devices in Drama

Introductory Message

For the facilitator:

Welcome to the Creative Writing Module on Various Elements, Techniques and Literary Devices in Drama.

This module was collaboratively designed, developed and reviewed by educators both from public and private institutions to assist you, the teacher or facilitator in helping the learners meet the standards set by the K to 12 Curriculum while overcoming their personal, social, and economic constraints in schooling.

This learning resource hopes to engage the learners into guided and independent learning activities at their own pace and time. Furthermore, this also aims to help learners acquire the needed 21st century skills while taking into consideration their needs and circumstances.

In addition to the material in the main text, you will also see this box in the body of the module:

Notes to the Teacher

This contains helpful tips or strategies that will help you in guiding the learners.

As a facilitator, you are expected to orient the learners on how to use this module. You also need to keep track of the learners' progress while allowing them to manage their own learning. Furthermore, you are expected to encourage and assist the learners as they do the tasks included in the module.

For the learner:

Welcome to the Creative Writing Module on Various Elements, Techniques and Literary Devices in Drama.

This module was designed to provide you with fun and meaningful opportunities for guided and independent learning at your own pace and time. You will be enabled to process the contents of the learning resource while being an active learner.

CONTENT STANDARD

The learners have an understanding of drama as a genre and are able to analyze its elements and techniques.

PERFORMANCE STANDARD

The learners are able to compose at least one scene for a one-act play that can be staged.

LEARNING COMPETENCY

The learners are able to identify the various elements, techniques, and literary devices in drama.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the end of this learning module the learner should be able to:

1. Identify the various elements, techniques and literary devices in drama.
2. Understand the various elements, techniques and literary devices in drama.
3. Apply the techniques and literary devices in writing a drama.

INTRODUCTION

Drama is a composition in prose form that presents a story entirely told in dialogue and action and written with the intention of its eventual performance before an audience. Drama can be defined as a dramatic work that actors present on stage. A story is dramatized, which means the characters and events in the story are brought to life through a stage performance by actors who play roles of the characters in the story and act through its events, taking the story forward. In enacting the roles, actors portray the character's emotions and personalities. The story progresses through verbal and non-verbal interactions between the characters, and the presentation is suitably supplemented by audio and visual effects.

Through the characters involved, the story has a message to give. It forms the central theme of the play around which the plot is built. While some consider music and visuals as separate elements, others prefer to club them under staging which can be regarded as an independent element of drama. Lighting, sound effects, costumes, makeup, gestures or body language given to characters, the stage setup, and the props used can together be considered as symbols that are elements of drama. What dictates most other dramatic elements is the setting; that is the time period and location in which the story takes place. This Buzzle article introduces you to the elements of drama and their importance.

HOW TO LEARN FROM THIS MODULE

In order for you to be able to finish and grasp the lesson in this module please be guided with the following:

1. Start your day with a positive attitude
2. Make sure to plan how to do each of the activities.
3. Read carefully the directions and texts in the activities.
4. If you have questions please your teacher for help.
5. Lastly do your best in every module you do.

PRESENTATION OF THE NEW LESSON

For this module you will learn and understand the literary techniques / literary devices. This module tackles about the literary techniques or literary devices that are used in writing drama.

ACTIVITY

Give an example of each literary device that is used in dramatic scenery.

Allusion is a reference to a person, place, or event or to another literary work or passage.

Example: She was the Eve of tomorrow.

Dramatic Irony occurs when a character's words or acts carry a larger meaning that the character does not perceive. He/she expects the opposite of what fate holds in store, or unknowingly says something that has a double meaning. The audience, however, is fully aware of the character's situation.

Example: A character may ignorantly state, "I feel something evil in the air." The audience will be aware that the character is soon to be murdered.

Imagery is the picture created by the author's use of words. They are the playwright's way of creating an atmosphere which is to tell his story. Imagery is the recurrent uses of "word pictures". It provides an imaginative, yet vivid, specific description.

Example:

(WRONG) Your words hurt me

(CORRECT) Your words are razors to my wounded heart.

Hyperbole is an exaggeration used to create a specific effect.

Example: She gave us a million pages to read for homework.

Metaphor is a figure of speech used to imply rather than directly express a comparison between 2 objects.

Example: He soared and plunged through the air in a one engine plane.

Simile a figure of speech used to directly express a comparison between 2 objects.

Example: The spot was as small as a pea.

Paradox is when a character says something that sounds contrary or absurd, but which holds some truth to it.

Example: "Fair is foul."

Pathetic Fallacy is a figure of speech that describes nature or inanimate things in a way that is sympathetic to or prophetic about the events in the plot and/or the emotions of the character.

Example: The somber clouds darkened our mood.

Personification a figure of speech in which a quality or idea is represented by human qualities, or nature is portrayed as having human feelings, intelligence or emotions

Example: Cupid is the personification of love.

ANALYSIS

Identification: Identify the following sentences by choosing the appropriate literary devices inside the box.

Allusion	Hyperbole	Paradox
Dramatic Irony	Metaphor	Pathetic Fallacy
Imagery	Simile	Personification

- _____ 1. That man is as tall as a house.
- _____ 2. They fought like cats and dogs.
- _____ 3. Lightning danced across the sky.
- _____ 4. Nature abhors a vacuum.
- _____ 5. It's so beautiful I could just die.

ABSTRACTION

What is drama?

Drama is a composition in prose form that presents a story entirely told in a dialogue and action and written with the intention of its eventual performance before an audience.

Drama is a composition of prose or poetry that is transformed into a performance on stage. The story progresses through interactions between its characters and ends with a message for the audience.

Drama can be defined as a dramatic work that actors present on stage. A story is dramatized, which means the characters and events in the story are brought to life through a stage performance by actors who play roles of the characters in the story and act through its events, taking the story forward. In enacting the roles, actors portray the character's emotions and personalities. The story progresses through verbal and non-verbal interactions between the characters, and the presentation is suitably supplemented by audio and visual effects.

Through the characters involved, the story has a message to give. It forms the central theme of the play around which the plot is built. While some consider music and visuals as separate elements, others prefer to club them under staging which can be regarded as an independent element of drama. Lighting, sound effects, costumes, makeup, gestures or body language given to characters, the stage setup, and the props used can together be considered as symbols that are elements of drama. What dictates most other dramatic elements is the setting; that is the time period and location in which the story takes place. This Buzzle article introduces you to the elements of drama and their importance.

Drama has a two-fold nature: Literature and Theater

Elements of Drama

Characters are the people in the play and thus considered as the principal material in a drama.

The characters that form a part of the story are interwoven with the plot of the drama. Each character in a play has a personality of its own and a set of principles and beliefs. Actors in the play have the responsibility of bringing the characters to life. The main character in the play who the audience identifies with, is the protagonist. He/she represents the theme of the play. The character that the protagonist conflicts with, is the antagonist or villain. While some characters play an active role throughout the story, some are only meant to take the story forward and some others appear only in certain parts of the story and may or may not have a significant role in it. Sometimes, these characters are of help in making the audiences focus on the play's theme or main characters. The way in which the characters are portrayed and developed is known as characterization.

Character Aspects

Physical

It identifies peripheral facts such as age, sexual, category, size, race and colour. It deals with external attributes which may be envisaged from the description of the playwright or deduced from what the characters verbalize about his appearance.

Social

It embraces all aspects that can be gleaned from the character's world or environment as exemplified by the economic status, occupation or trade, creed, familial affiliation of the characters.

Psychological

It discloses the inner mechanism of the mind of the character as exemplified by his habitual responses, attitudes, longings, purposes, likes and dislikes. It is considered as the most indispensable level of character categorization because routines and emotions, thoughts, attitude and behaviour enable the readers to know the character intrinsically.

Moral

It discloses the decisions of the characters, either socially acceptable or not, exposing their intentions, thus projecting what is upright or not.

Setting identifies the time and place in which the events occur. It consists of the historical period, the moment, day and season in which the incidents take place. It also includes the sceneries in the performance which are usually found in the preliminary descriptions. The time and place where a story is set is one of its important parts. The era or time in which the incidents in the play take place, influence the characters in their appearance and personalities. The time setting may affect the central theme of the play, the issues raised (if any), the conflict, and the interactions between the characters. The historical and social context of the play is also defined by the time and place where it is set. The time period and the location in which the story is set, affect the play's staging. Costumes and makeup, the backgrounds and the furniture used, the visuals (colors and kind of lighting), and the sound are among the important elements of a play that dictate how the story is translated into a stage performance. The Merchant of Venice has been set in the 16th century Venice. Romeo and Juliet has been set in the era between 1300 and 1600, perhaps the Renaissance period which is the 14th and 15th centuries.

Plot

It lays out the series of events that form the entirety of the play. It serves as a structural framework which brings the events to a cohesive form and sense.

The order of events occurring in a play makes its plot. Essentially, the plot is the story that the play narrates. The entertainment value of a play depends largely on the sequence of events in the story. The connection between the events and the characters in them form an integral part of the plot. What the characters do, how they interact, the course of their lives as narrated by the story, and what happens to them in the end, constitutes the plot. A struggle between two individuals, the relation between them, a struggle with self, a dilemma, or any form of conflict of one character with himself or another character in the play, goes into forming the story's plot. The story unfolds through a series of incidents that share a cause-and-effect relationship. Generally, a story begins with exposing the past or background of the main and other characters, and the point of conflict, then proceeds to giving the central theme or climax. Then comes the consequences of the climax and the play ends with a conclusion.

Types of Plot

Natural Plot

It is a chronological sequence of events arrangement where actions continuously take place as an end result of the previous action.

Episodic Plot

Each episode independently comprises a setting, climax, and resolution; therefore, a full story in itself is formed.

Beginning identifies information about the place, such as geographical location, social, cultural, political background or period when the event took place.

Exposition

Exposition is the point where the playwright commences his story. It reveals the identity of story's initial crisis.

Middle is composed of a series of difficulties:

Complications

Complications bring changes and alterations in the movement of the action which take place when discovery of novel information, unexpected alteration of plan, choosing between two courses of action or preface of new ideas are revealed.

Crisis

Crisis reveals the peak of anticipation in the series of incidents.

Obligatory Scene

Obligatory scene identifies the open collision between two opposing characters or forces.

Discovery

Discovery discloses points which are previously unknown, characterized as something mysterious, strange, unfamiliar, and thus revealed through objects, persons, facts, values, or self-discovered.

Ending is the final major component of the story which brings the condition back to its stability. This part brings satisfaction to the audience which extends to the final curtain as peace is completely restored.

Dialogue

The story of a play is taken forward by means of dialogs. The story is narrated to the audiences through the interaction between the play's characters, which is in the form of dialogs. The contents of the dialogs and the quality of their delivery have a major role to play in the impact that the play has on the audiences. It is through the dialogs between characters that the story can be understood. They are important in revealing the personalities of the characters. The words used, the accent, tone, pattern of speech, and even the pauses in speech, say a lot about the character and help reveal not just his personality, but also his social status, past, and family background as given by the play. Monologues and soliloquies that are speeches given to oneself or to other characters help put forward points that would have been difficult to express through dialogs. "What's in a name? That which we call a rose By any other name would smell as sweet" from Romeo and Juliet in which Juliet tells Romeo of the insignificance of names or "To be, or not to be", a soliloquy from Hamlet are some of the greatest lines in literature.

Theme

Theme is considered as the unifying element that defines the dramatized idea of the play. It is the over-all sense or implication of the action. It defines the problem, emphasizes the ethical judgement and suggest attitude or course of action that eliminates the crisis in an acceptable way.

Dramatic Literary Devices

Allusion is a reference to a person, place, or event or to another literary work or passage. Serves to illustrate or clarify or enhance a subject.

Ex. She was the Eve of tomorrow.

Dramatic Irony occurs when a character's words or acts carry a larger meaning that the character does not perceive. He/she expects the opposite of what fate holds in store, or unknowingly says something that has a double meaning. The audience, however, is fully aware of the character's situation.

ex. A character may ignorantly state, "I feel something evil in the air." The audience will be aware that the character is soon to be murdered.

Imagery are the pictures created by the author's use of words. They are the playwright's way of creating an atmosphere in which to tell his story. Imagery is the recurrent uses of "word pictures". It provides an imaginative, yet vivid, specific description.

ex. recurring images of blood, darkness, and vicious animals create an evil atmosphere of gloom, death, despair, etc.

ex. Your words hurt me vs. Your words are razors to my wounded heart.

Imagery is created through the use of figurative language created by some of the following devices:

Hyperbole is an exaggeration used to create a specific effect

ex. She gave us a million pages to read for homework.

Metaphor a figure of speech used to imply rather than directly express a comparison between 2 objects.

ex. He soared and plunged through the air in a one engine plane.

Simile is a figure of speech used to directly express a comparison between 2 objects.

ex. The spot was as small as a pea.

Paradox is when a character says something that sounds contrary or absurd, but which holds some truth to it.

I.e. "Fair is foul."

Pathetic Fallacy is a figure of speech that describes nature or inanimate things in a way that is sympathetic to or prophetic about the events in the plot and/or the emotions of the characters

Personification is a figure of speech in which a quality or idea is represented by human qualities, or nature is portrayed as having human feelings, intelligence or emotions
ex. Cupid is the personification of love.

The cruel, crawling sea.

Exercise #1

Direction: Read the short story below entitled "The Story of an Hour" by Kate Chopin (1894). Select all the lines that used literary devices.

"The Story of An Hour"

Kate Chopin (1894)

Knowing that Mrs. Mallard was afflicted with a heart trouble, great care was taken to break to her as gently as possible the news of her husband's death.

It was her sister Josephine who told her, in broken sentences; veiled hints that revealed in half concealing. Her husband's friend Richards was there, too, near her. It was he who had been in the newspaper office when intelligence of the railroad disaster was received, with Brently Mallard's name leading the list of "killed." He had only taken the time to assure himself of its truth by a second telegram, and had hastened to forestall any less careful, less tender friend in bearing the sad message.

She did not hear the story as many women have heard the same, with a paralyzed inability to accept its significance. She wept at once, with sudden, wild abandonment, in her sister's arms. When the storm of grief had spent itself she went away to her room alone. She would have no one follow her.

There stood, facing the open window, a comfortable, roomy armchair. Into this she sank, pressed down by a physical exhaustion that haunted her body and seemed to reach into her soul.

She could see in the open square before her house the tops of trees that were all aquiver with the new spring life. The delicious breath of rain was in the air. In the street below a peddler was crying his wares. The notes of a distant song which some one was singing reached her faintly, and countless sparrows were twittering in the eaves.

There were patches of blue sky showing here and there through the clouds that had met and piled one above the other in the west facing her window.

She sat with her head thrown back upon the cushion of the chair, quite motionless, except when a sob came up into her throat and shook her, as a child who has cried itself to sleep continues to sob in its dreams.

She was young, with a fair, calm face, whose lines bespoke repression and even a certain strength. But now there was a dull stare in her eyes, whose gaze was fixed away off yonder on one of those patches of blue sky. It was not a glance of reflection, but rather indicated a suspension of intelligent thought.

There was something coming to her and she was waiting for it, fearfully. What was it? She did not know; it was too subtle and elusive to name. But she felt it, creeping out of the sky, reaching toward her through the sounds, the scents, the color that filled the air.

Now her bosom rose and fell tumultuously. She was beginning to recognize this thing that was approaching to possess her, and she was striving to beat it back with her will--as powerless as her two white slender hands would have been. When she abandoned herself a little whispered word escaped her slightly parted lips. She said it over and over under hte breath: "free, free, free!" The vacant stare and the look of terror that had followed it went from her eyes. They stayed keen and bright. Her pulses beat fast, and the coursing blood warmed and relaxed every inch of her body.

She did not stop to ask if it were or were not a monstrous joy that held her. A clear and exalted perception enabled her to dismiss the suggestion as trivial. She knew that she would weep again when she saw the kind, tender hands folded in death; the face that had never looked save with love upon her, fixed and gray and dead. But she saw beyond that bitter moment a long procession of years to come that would belong to her absolutely. And she opened and spread her arms out to them in welcome.

There would be no one to live for during those coming years; she would live for herself. There would be no powerful will bending hers in that blind persistence with which men and women believe they have a right to impose a private will upon a fellow-creature. A kind intention or a cruel intention made the act seem no less a crime as she looked upon it in that brief moment of illumination.

And yet she had loved him--sometimes. Often she had not. What did it matter! What could love, the unsolved mystery, count for in the face of this possession of self-assertion which she suddenly recognized as the strongest impulse of her being!

"Free! Body and soul free!" she kept whispering.

Josephine was kneeling before the closed door with her lips to the keyhole, imploring for admission. "Louise, open the door! I beg; open the door--you will make yourself ill. What are you doing, Louise? For heaven's sake open the door."

"Go away. I am not making myself ill." No; she was drinking in a very elixir of life through that open window.

Her fancy was running riot along those days ahead of her. Spring days, and summer days, and all sorts of days that would be her own. She breathed a quick prayer that life might be long. It was only yesterday she had thought with a shudder that life might be long.

She arose at length and opened the door to her sister's importunities. There was a feverish triumph in her eyes, and she carried herself unwittingly like a goddess of Victory. She clasped her sister's waist, and together they descended the stairs. Richards stood waiting for them at the bottom.

Someone was opening the front door with a latchkey. It was Brently Mallard who entered, a little travel-stained, composedly carrying his grip-sack and umbrella. He had been far from the scene of the accident, and did not even know there had been one. He stood amazed at Josephine's piercing cry; at Richards' quick motion to screen him from the view of his wife.

Exercise 1

Direction: Write inside the box all the lines in the short story that used literary devices.

Exercise 2

Direction: Identify the literary device of each line you chose from the short story.
