What I Need to Know

Note to the facilitator:

- 1) You will be a teacher to your child in the following parts of this module: What I Need to Know, What's New;
- 2) If your child needs further explanation, you may guide them in the examples given on the following part of the module: What's In, activities under What's More, Additional activities but you have to let them do the succeeding exercises;
- 3) You should let your child do on his/her own the exercises found under What I Know, Assessments under What's More and Post Test;
- 4) Be the one also to check their answer and refer to the key answer at the back of this module. The next move of your child depends on his/her score which was indicated below each activity.

Nouns are words that name a person, animal, thing, place or event. There are different kinds of nouns. There are nouns that refer to a group or a whole unit of persons, animals, places, or objects and we call it as collective nouns.

Mastering this skill will help you understand and be able to apply language concepts easily to your own language experiences. As you read and write, you construct meaning. That means, you recall information, interpret it, assess and evaluate it, then apply the information in a meaningful way such that you can transfer information to new situations.

This module gives you guided language experiences and independent practice that will help you to think and communicate with ease and confidence. After doing the activities, you are expected to be an expert in this learning competency:

Use clear and coherent sentences employing appropriate grammatical structures: Kinds of Nouns-Collective Nouns. EN4G-Id-33 (MELC)

3. In every activity, there is an example which can be your guide on what to do.
4. Kindly check your answers. Refer to the key answer under Activity 1 at the back of this learning material. Were you able to get 10 correct answers? If yes, you can proceed to the assessment 1. But if you got 9 or less, you have to study where you got an incorrect answer.

The Flies and the Ants

Anonymous

Adapted by Jennalyn S. Datuin

A squadron of flies appeared one day
In the ant village where all the ants stay.
Upon hearing the sound, the soldiers got their guns
Went to the palace of King Ant, where they were having fun.
In the king's palace was a very big feast,
For the ants had killed the cruel fly beast.
Some soldier ants broke into the King's room
Informed the King that the ant kingdom was doomed.
The raging flies began a powerful attack;
The unprepared ants were taken aback.
"Run to the nearest hole," King Ant ordered.
"So that none of you would be hurt and murdered."
A battalion of ant soldiers was ready to fight,
The swooping squadron of flies was full of spite.
The King ordered his ants to fill the ground with glue.
The flies would be trapped; they can never let go.
When the squadron of flies swooped down to attack,
All of them were trapped; they couldn't get back.
The ants were joyful; for they knew they had won.
They ran back to the palace to continue their fun.
The ant band played; a choir of ants sang.
There was music and dancing; fireworks went BANG!
Then King Ant spoke; there was silence in the hall:
"We are all united. Congratulations to all!"
