Focus Skills

- ◆ Direct Speech and Reported Speech

Learning Objectives

- A. Identify reported speech and direct speech
- B. Change direct speech to reported speech
- C. Rewrite sentences supplying the proper punctuation marks.

Learning Competency

- ◆ Grammar Awareness

The SIM is composed of three sub tasks:

- A. Activity Card- Prepares students to perform the task using their prior knowledge about the topic.
- B. Assessment Card- This contains assessment activities for the students to accomplish. Thus, it measures how far the students understood the lesson.
- C. Enrichment Card- These activities are provided for the students to repeat performance of the task for mastery of learning.

Just a Glimpse of the Past

Reported speech relates someone's words without quoting the exact word that can introduce an individual's statement.

Example: Echar said that he is an Igorot.

Direct Speech refers to the actual words of a speaker or writer, indicated with quotation marks.

Example: Echar said, "I am an Igorot."

Always remember:

In transforming direct speeches to reported speeches, changes occur in the tense of verbs, use of connectives, and pronouns. In direct speeches, always enclosed in quotation marks the exact words of the speaker.

The comma and the period are placed before the quotation mark. The colon, semicolon, the exclamatory point, and the question mark are placed within or outside the quotation depending upon whether they belong or do not belong to the quoted words.

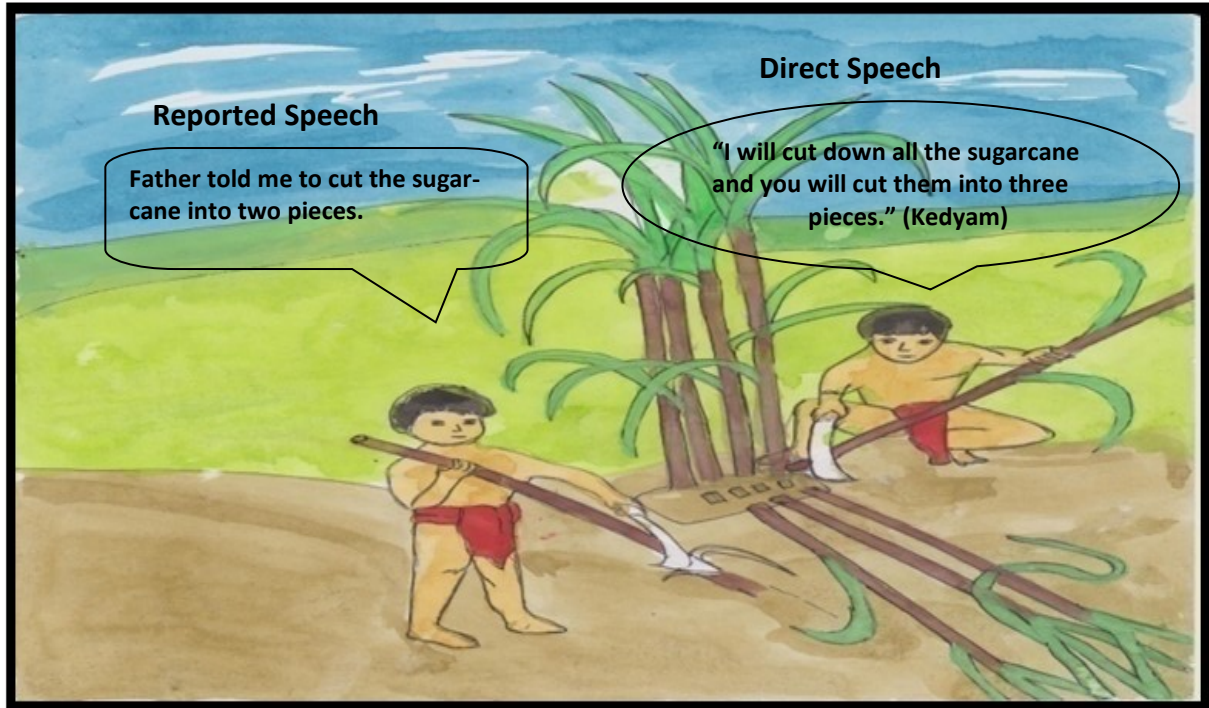

Now! Are you ready to face the challenge?

Let's start.

Activity Card

Activity I

Study the dialog below between Echar and Kedyam.

Read the following statements taken from the story Echar and Kedyam.
Identify whether it is direct speech or reported speech. Write your answer in your answer

- _____ 1. One time Echar said to his son, "You stay here and play with the children while I go above to check on the water in our field."
- _____ 2. Their neighbor said that he really didn't know.
- _____ 3. Echar says that he sees the child.
- _____ 4. "So the children did go this way, and it must have been the son of Kedyam who led my son here," Echar whispered to himself.
- _____ 5. "Why are you running away?" shouted Echar.
- _____ 6. "Why don't you tell me where your playmate has gone to?" he asked.
- _____ 7. She asked why he left their son alone.
- _____ 8. She said, "Had you not gone, he might not have been cut."
- _____ 9. Kedyam said that Kafunyan could be sometimes misleading.
- _____ 10. He told me to wait until he is ready.

Activity II

Below are rules to follow about reported and direct speech. Identify if the statement refers to reported or direct speech. Make two columns in your answer sheet. The first column will be for direct speech and the second column will be for reported speech.

Copy and write each statement in its proper column if it is reported speech or direct speech.

1. Place the word "that" before the words of the speaker. Most of the time, you may omit "that" if you wish.
2. A comma (,) is put before the close quotation marks to separate the words of the speaker from the words of the explanation.
3. Change the tense of the verb in the subordinate clause to follow the verb in the main clause.
4. Open and close quotation marks are placed before and after the exact words of the speaker.
5. Remove the quotation marks.
6. Change the pronoun so that it agrees with its antecedent.
7. Punctuation marks necessary are put before the close quotation mark.

 Direct Speech (3Statements)	 Reported Speech (4Statements)

Activity III

Read the excerpt from the story Echar and Kedyam. Then, do the activities that follow.

Remember: Direct speeches can be noted in the excerpt. In transforming direct speech to reported speeches, changes occur in the tense of verbs, use of connectives, and pronouns as in the example below.

Direct Speech: "Please don't kill Kedyam," his first born son begged his father.

Reported Speech: His first born son begged his father not to kill Kedyam.

Direct Speech: "If I kill Kedyam," Echar thought, "I will be killed too."

Reported Speech: Echar thought that if he would kill Kedyam, he would be killed too.

Direct Speech: "I want to kill Kedyam," Echar would tell himself fiercely.

Reported Speech: Echar would tell himself fiercely that he wanted to kill Kedyam.

Echar's son spoke with them and said, "I just don't know what happened to me. I was playing tops with Kedyam's son, when suddenly he slapped me. Then I couldn't feel anymore, and must have fallen asleep." So Echar went to his town mates and said, "If this is what has happened, we must take revenge." So the townspeople said, "We will surely revenge this."

The next day they, all went down to the river where there was an adaway tree. "Knock on that adaway tree," said Echar, "if it is hollow inside," so they cut it into pieces and carried it to the place where it was to be cleaned. Then Echar walked into the river and picked out a hard stone to be used as an anvil, such as the kind found at Amfowet. Some men were cutting up the adaway tree, and others were smoothing it out. After the tree was cleaned Echar said to the men, "Go and catch an old rooster so we can use the tail and the neck feathers as a piston-ring for our weapons." Finally the weapons were set up, and it operated very well.

Echar took a metal vat and broke it, and the townspeople grabbed for the broken pieces. When the disorder was over, they tried to soften a piece of the vat iron. Echar said, "This clumsy thing is a weapon of a headhunter, who must be as graceful as a cat. Surely, when a thorny bush blocks your way you should at least be able to cut it." Then Echar got a small vat and broke it on the leg of a ladder, and all the townspeople grabbed furiously for the pieces. "Suppose you try to soften just one piece," said Echar. So they tried one piece, and made it pliable. "Now this is the weapon of a headhunter," said Echar. When the work was finished Echar said, "Now we all have weapons. Tomorrow, we will go and bathe in the river." "Yes indeed," said the townspeople.

(An excerpt from the story, "Echar kan Kedyam")

Now, Look for at least 5 examples of direct speeches from the excerpt and change them into reported speeches. Use your answer sheet for your answers.
